conditions of reproduction

Canterbury Museum encourages the reproduction of images from its collection in order to improve public access. However it also requires that certain conditions be observed. Permission to publish or display Canterbury Museum images is dependent on full acceptance of the conditions outlined in this document and payment of the appropriate fee, if required.

These conditions apply to all reproductions for publication or display of materials held by Canterbury Museum. The Museum makes a distinction between commercial and non-commercial publication or display and charges an additional fee for commercial use. Our staff will be happy to advise you if you have any questions.

Within the Museum's collections are many items acquired by bequest, donation or loan, under special conditions. The Museum has a responsibility to ensure that the material in its care is used in a way which upholds the integrity of the original item and is consistent with the undertakings made at the time of acquisition. Use of Museum images must also take account of cultural and personal sensitivities. While every effort is made to ensure that the collections are free of legal restrictions and available for public use, the user is responsible for clearing copyright and for meeting any other requirements placed on the image by the owner, donor and/or creator of the original.

Applications must be made in writing on the form above and must include the intended purpose. Permission to reproduce covers only the specific occasion and use described on the application form. Any additional use requires a new application and may incur an additional fee.

Members of the public may not photograph or scan items in the Museum's collection, or reproduce a Canterbury Museum image directly from a publication. Prints or photocopies supplied by the Museum may not be re-photographed. No networking of a digital image is permitted. Express permission must be obtained for recording material onto videotape, film, CD-Rom or any other information storage medium.

All requests to reproduce images from the collections which relate to Maori will be referred to the Museum's Ohaki O Nga Tipuna for consideration before permission can be granted.

In order to maintain the integrity of the Museum's images, no cropping or manipulation (for example, colouring) is allowed without permission.

Canterbury Museum does not grant exclusive or perpetual rights and reserves the right to refuse applications.

Canterbury Museum will provide reproduction quality copies of items from its collections for publication or display in order to be assured that the quality of the image is satisfactory. Copies should be paid for at the time of ordering.

Canterbury Museum also supplies "reference only" copies. These may be in the form of photocopies, microfiche print-outs or laser copies.

The Museum does not provide negatives.

Acknowledgement to Canterbury Museum and a detailed citation for each item must accompany any reproduction. This should include the original artist, photographer or collector's name and the image's title, where known, as well as the Museum's reference number. Full credit details will be provided with reproduction copies. If the exact caption information supplied by the Museum is not used, the sense of the caption must be retained.
